Art Unit: 2671

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over FREDRICKSON et al. (5,131,080) in view of ALCORN et al. (5,185,856).

As per claim 1, Fredrickson teaches the claimed "display system" comprising:

"A memory" (Fredrickson, figure 2B); and

"An attribute system" (Fredrickson, column 10, lines 1-60).

It is noted that Fredrickson does not explicitly teach "attribute data" as claimed.

However, Fredrickson's (X, Y, Z) coordinate and color attributes (R, G, B) or overlay data (memory RAM 98) suggests the storing of "logical regions and attribute data" as claimed.

Furthermore, Alcorn teaches that such attribute data is well known in the art (Alcorn, column 4, lines 29-35). Thus, it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made, in view of the teaching of Alcorn, to configure Fredrickson's system as claimed by implementing the blending data, or specular and diffuse parameters, ... as the attribute data as claimed.

Claim 2 adds into claim 1 that the graphics data and attribute data are stored in physically separate memories which Fredrickson teaches in figure 2B with different memory planes.

Art Unit: 2671

Due to the similarity of claims 3-6, 7-8, and 9-10 to claims 1-2, they are rejected under a similar reason.

Accordingly, the claimed invention as represented in the claims does not represent a patentable distinction over the art of record.
